Course Description

Students work with texts and exercises relating to daily life (family, home, work, shopping, food). The course includes extensive practice in communicative speech functions, such as greetings, asking for and providing information, and expressing opinions and feelings. Work with the main features of Norwegian phonetics and grammar is also central to this course. By the end of the course students are able to understand clearly spoken Norwegian; read textbooks and similar texts; and talk about subjects relating to everyday life; pronounce Norwegian in a way that does not interfere with communication; write about topics dealt with in the course; express thoughts and opinions, albeit simply; and know the basic rules of Norwegian grammar.
