Course Description

This course provides a fundamental introduction to Intercultural Communication. Students examine the following key concepts: culture, race, gender, ethnicity, stereotypes, values, expectations, and assumptions. By focusing on applied outcomes of intercultural communication theory, the course enables students to acquire intercultural competences for their professional and personal life. Students learn interpretative strategies in intercultural communication concepts that allow them to become culturally intelligent. They will acquire tools that enable them to avoid attribution errors when communicating across cultures. Students participate in interactive exercises to practice their intercultural competences. A field trip in the local area is also be a part of the course.
