Course Description

This course investigates some of the events and processes which have led to a more integrated world order between the mid-19th century and the later 20th century. For most of that period much of the world was carved up between a number of inter-continental empires centered in Europe. How those empires grew, exerted control and in due course retreated will be the particular focus of the course. But other processes, too, are considered, as are the evolution of such ideologies as imperialism or communism and whether such ideologies impacted upon changing global power relationships.
