Course Description

This course takes a critical and in-depth look at language teaching methodology in light of recent research findings in second language acquisition. Approaches and methods will be reviewed and focus will be placed on task-based language teaching (TBLT). Theoretical and pedagogical principles underlying TBLT will be discussed as background to the approach and students will explore means of implementing TBLT in their own classrooms. Finally, comparative studies examining the merits of TBLT versus other approaches and methods will be critically examined.
