Course Description

This course is an overview of theoretical constructs and practical applications of leadership. Through readings, videos, assignments, and purposeful experiential missions, the course guides students in developing individual approaches to effective leadership. It provides a bridge between the Mexico and Sacramento halves of the program and has the following objectives:

1. To stimulate meaningful reflection for the participants in the Leadership in Social Justice & Public Policy program
2. To introduce and examine historical, philosophical, and theoretical perspectives of leadership
3. To explore practical applications of leadership theories
4. To assess and strengthen leadership skills and abilities
5. To understand how social identities influence leadership
