Course Description

This course provides key challenges in the foreign policy of the Indo-Pacific region. The central theme of the course is whether the Indo-Pacific region is heading towards greater cooperation or conflict. The first part of the course examines theories on foreign policy challenges and problem-solving and the crisis of America-led liberal order. The second part of the course covers key challenges surrounding the Indo-Pacific, including China's challenge to US power; China's response to the Indo-Pacific challenge; decoupling from China; Sino-Japanese relations and history problem; the Taiwan issue; the North Korean nuclear crisis, and territorial disputes.
