Course Description

This course presents international trade theory and trade policy practices. Relevant international trade theories are discussed together with the hypothesized consequences and empirical support. The course examines both tariff and non-tariff trade policy measures. In the latter, both traditional (e.g. quota, local content requirements) and new forms (sanitary and phyto-sanitary, technical requirement) of non-tariff measures are covered. The course also discusses free trade agreements and international production sharing, and their impacts.
