Course Description
This course covers the basic concepts of international relations. The first part of the course introduces the concepts of nation, state, sovereignty, non-state actors and their implications for the coexistence of nation-states, as well as a brief roundup of the instruments of conducting relations among them. The second part offers a grounding in the major schools of thought on international relations, namely realism, liberalism, pluralism, and revolution. Additionally, students discuss topics on radical perspectives such as feminism, costructivism, and postmodernism.
