COURSE DETAIL

THE SELF AND THE WORLD IN TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY U.S. FICTION
Country Denmark
Host Institution University of Copenhagen
Program(s) University of Copenhagen
UCEAP Course Level Upper Division
UCEAP Subject Area(s) English
UCEAP Course Number 109
UCEAP Course Suffix
UCEAP Official Title THE SELF AND THE WORLD IN TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY U.S. FICTION
UCEAP Transcript Title SELF & THE WORLD
UCEAP Quarter Units 12.00
UCEAP Semester Units 8.00

Course Description

This course focuses on twenty-first century U.S. fiction. It includes reading works from five to six authors for each section of the course. One half of the course focuses on twenty-first century transnational American fiction: texts that situate the United States at global scales (hemispheric, transatlantic, and transpacific), often with an emphasis on migration. The other half of the course focuses on twenty-first century U.S. fiction that raises and explores questions of selfhood, identity, and gender. Both parts of the course examine how the themes and forms of twenty-first century U.S. fiction relate to the changing identity of the nation, the state, and the self in today's globalized world.

Language(s) of Instruction
English

Host Institution Course Number
HENKF2402U

Host Institution Course Title
THE SELF AND THE WORLD IN TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY U.S. FICTION

Host Institution Course Details
https://kurser.ku.dk/course/henkf2402u/2023-2024

Host Institution Campus

Host Institution Faculty
Humanities

Host Institution Degree
Master

Host Institution Department
English, Germanic and Romance Studies

Course Last Reviewed
2023-2024

Print