Course Description
Psychologists study human nature at many levels, from the cells that constitute us to the collectives that comprise us. This course covers the microscopic to the macroscopic, showing how social and natural scientists answer basic questions about human nature. The course is an introduction to the sciences of mind, including foundational concepts from neuroscience, evolution, genetics, philosophy, and experimental methods, and specific topics such as perception, memory, consciousness, child development, emotion, motivation, sexuality, survival, and social relations.
