Course Description

This Italian language course at the Common European Framework (CEFR) level of B2 is for students who want to reach an advanced intermediate level of Italian. Students at the B2 level learn to understand the main ideas of complex texts on both concrete and abstract topics; learn to understand technical discussions and interact with a certain fluency; and learn to produce a clear and detailed text and to argue. The course reviews how to understand and reliably report the opinions and arguments of others; understand and express the meaning of a text; describe places, people, animals, objects, events, and equipment clearly and precisely; describe the structure and explain the contents of a text, written or oral, and in a course, express different points of view; expose the results of a study or research, showing an understanding of the data and information, and how to make comparisons, clarifications, and examples; express certainty or uncertainty about something with explicit linguistic means; make study projects, planning, and research; and complaining and protesting. Students must have attained the equivalent of the B1 level as a prerequisite. The course is graded pass/no pass only.
