Course Description

This course considers a number of domains of higher cognitive processing. Part of the course focuses on the cognitive processes involved in speech perception, language comprehension, language production, and reading. The remainder of the course examines the cognitive processes involved in reasoning and skill acquisition. The practical program exposes students to a variety of the research methods used to investigate higher cognitive processes, develop their understanding of how these methods can be used to investigate hypotheses about mental processes and consider applications of cognitive research to real-world problems and issues.
