Course Description
This course introduces the main currents of Chinese spiritual traditions, tracing into literary and philosophical texts the inner experience that they carry and interpret. Through a selection of relevant texts and excepts, the students navigate throughout Taoist, Confucian, Buddhist and popular traditions, and also discover latter-days Chinese, Christian and Islamic thinkers. They learn to understand and compare the structure of the spiritual world as suggested by various schools, mystics and authors, and to approach the journeys that have been undertaken into the inner world. The goal of the course is also to provide students with skills in comparative textural and cultural studies, by refining their sensitivity to the experimental and personal background that lies behind major texts of Chinese culture.
