Course Description

The focus of the course, which draws on insights from a range of disciplines including law, psychology and economics, is on contemporary dispute resolution theories across a range of settings, with a particular emphasis on how the legal system should understand the interests of disputing commercial parties. The course examines the interface between theory and practice and assists students in using theories of conflict resolution and dispute management to understand and address contemporary challenges as to how various methods should be used to settle claims in different contexts.
