Course Description

This course provides students with insight into the origins of modern celebrity within the literary and theatrical marketplaces of the long 18th century. The course also provides a grounding in the burgeoning field of celebrity studies and encourages reflection on continuities between the 18th century's public spheres and our own. It traces the rise of different kinds of celebrity within 18th-century Britain's literary and theatrical marketplaces. Students examine the fame of authors, performers, criminals, politicians, and numerous, notorious others.
