Course Description

This course is designed to study and review the global efforts to pursue sustainable development. Such efforts have developed the concrete three pillars (Poverty Reduction/Environmental Sustainability/Social Protection) of sustainable development. Especially, the United Nations (UN) has led to establish sustainable development knowledge and capacity for policy-makers, bilateral and multilateral agencies and civil society with local partners in developing countries. The course explores the basic concept of environmental issues and problems and principles of environmental policies that contribute to achieving the sustainable development goals. It is critical to understand the real environmental issues that are complex and challenging to tackle, finding practical solutions. Students will be participating in the discussion and debate on the sustainable development and its environmental components. Special focus is on the issue for developing countries, whose challenge is to harmonize the economic development and environmental conservation. Specific issues on climate change and sustainable development will be covered in depth.
