Course Description

This is an introductory course to security studies. The first three weeks of the course provides an overview of the core theoretical models and research questions in security studies, and core actors in this field, such as state intelligence services, alliances, and regional organizations. The course then analyzes some of the most critical security challenges the world has faced in 2024: cybersecurity, environmental change, global migration, energy security, and global health and epidemics such as COVID-19 or SARS.
