Course Description

This course provides an in-depth examination of the intersection between trade law and diplomacy in the context of international trade relations. Students will gain an understanding of real-world trade issues and will investigate the role of diplomacy in trade relations as well as the practice of trade laws focusing on the World Trade Organization and its dispute settlement procedure.

The course provides background case analysis of the previous WTO disputes and covers current and emerging trade issues such as US-China trade dispute, Indo-Pacific Economic Framework, Tech Diplomacy, and AI-related trade issues.

Professor Sangsoo Yoon was a career diplomat working for the Korean Foreign Ministry and his previous post was Consul General of the Republic of Korea in San Francisco, USA. During his diplomatic career, Professor Yoon has been heavily involved in multilateral trade negotiation in the World Trade Organization and has unique expertise in WTO dispute settlement procedures. Professor Yoon will share his first-hand knowledge on trade law and diplomacy and foster dialogue on current trade-related diplomatic issues.
