Course Description
This course provides a critical introduction to three broad themes of sexual morality, social issues, and matters of life and death. Topics on sexual morality include such issues as pornography, gay and lesbian issues, and prostitution. Social issues include animal rights, human rights, affirmative action, and cultural property. Matters of life and death explores such issues as euthanasia, abortion, and capital punishment. Each topic contains several sub-topics, where a multitude of views are presented, some more controversial than others. Assessment: three papers, one on each topic; and participation in three discussion group meetings which are held on each theme.
