Course Description

This is a higher level course (CEFR B2 - C1) for international students. Students will learn about the genre features of non-fiction texts such as reader's comments, opinion pieces, and job applications. Through writing summaries, students learn how to extract information from complex texts. Other relevant topics include the writing process, response/feedback groups, and the ideals of plain language. Students are expected to participate in response/feedback groups and actively give feedback to their peers. The learning objectives for written production in the curriculum Norwegian for immigrants - level C1 form the basis of the teaching, and the course is therefore useful for students who wish to take the Norwegian language test at level C1. This is a proficiency course with a final portfolio assessment.
