Course Description

Operations management is concerned with the design, planning, and control of operating systems for the provision of goods and services. This course provides an insight not only into the tools and techniques used in the development of operational systems but more importantly into the factors that affect the choice of operating methods. The course examines the different approaches to the planning cycle (process and facility design) with reference to the strategic aims of the organization. It also looks at the many different production control techniques: capacity planning, push and the Japanese perfected pull (just-in-time) systems and their effect on the effectiveness and efficiency of the organization.
