Course Description

The course builds on knowledge obtained in the Financial Accounting modules of Accountancy 1 and 2 to explore some of the more complex and controversial areas of financial reporting. The object is to develop a critical understanding of conceptual issues in financial accounting as well as to enhance technical and analytical skills. The course covers the advanced analysis and interpretation of the annual report, some of the more complex accounting standards not addressed in earlier courses, and current issues in financial reporting. The course broadens students' horizons by examining the regulations, techniques, and debates surrounding topics such as fair value accounting; accounting for financial instruments; revenue recognition; intangible assets, and accounting in specialist sectors. Students are also introduced to accounting for capital reconstruction.
