Course Description

While most businesses will employ an accountant for the preparation of financial statements and for analysis of accounting information, it may still be important that others, such as owners, managers, or employees, from a non-accounting background, have a good understanding of the importance of various aspects of accounting and finance for a business or organization. In this course, students view accounting as a tool of management, and learn how to critically evaluate financial reports to assess the performance of a business or organization, and to plan for its future activities.
