Course Description

This writing-intensive course provide preparatory skills in written communication that will support students in their multidisciplinary academic work throughout the degree and beyond, enabling them to develop as a confident and effective writer who can tailor their writing for a range of audiences. Throughout the term, in small-group writing workshops, students write and reflect on formative short pieces and will receive tutor and peer feedback; students then edit and redraft their writing to compile a summative portfolio. Moreover, the course provides opportunity for students to engage in detail with an interdisciplinary topic in the Arts, Humanities, or Social Sciences, led by a tutor from the Liberal Arts core team with specialist expertise in this area.
