Course Description

This course introduces an overview of the cultural tradition of East Asia by examining classical Chinese narratives translated into English. It explores how these narratives depict the essence of humanity and the world, discussing their influence on modern East Asian culture. Through the course, students identify the cultural characteristics inherent in East Asian civilization and develop a critical understanding of its contemporary discourses.

Student will be able to: 1. Understand the cultural concepts that underlie the individual, the family, and the state in East Asia 2. Learn the historical development of China, Japan, and Korea and their relationships with each other 3. Practice reading East Asian texts in their own literary tradition and relating them to cultural contexts
