Course Description

The course covers cities, towns, villages, and farming communities in a world of globalization. It will emphasize the mobility of people, money, products, and information which has transformed the logic, delimitation, and relations between urban and rural communities in different countries. Major theories on the interplay between culture and structure are covered as well as the societal and technological changes which have reconstructed urban-rural distinctions and interconnections. Special attention is given to patterns of migration within and between countries and their effects on the development of different settlements.
