Course Description

This course adheres to the educational philosophy of "cultivating character before artistry," constructing a film curriculum system that emphasizes "ideological depth, holistic thinking, and creativity." It uses technical skills as a bridge, prioritizes human-centered values, and places artistic integrity at the forefront. Through three stages—film appreciation, film deconstruction, and film creation—the course aims to truly approach the artistic essence of cinema and immerse students in the world of film. It seeks to break conventional thinking patterns by guiding students from "theory to practice," "skills to concepts," "understanding to experience," and "appreciation to creation." The course strives to harmonize "ideological depth and artistic expression," "emotional experience and logical thinking," and "knowledge and individuality," ultimately fostering outstanding high-level innovative talents.
