Course Description

This course analyzes the structure of Irish music, including the history and styles of ornamentation of the most common instruments. The most important dance types are also explored in great detail. Students focus on the history of singing in the tradition and are exposed to some of the major exponents of the tradition. Some of the most important Irish music collectors are examined in relation to their times. Students are guided through a field project that they pursue independently and that is part of their continuous assessment.
