Course Description

This course introduces students to the world economic dimension of the Korean economy, especially focusing on its trade, investment, and financial transactions with major partners. Students learn the basic theories of microeconomics and macroeconomics, and how these theories are applied to reality using Korean examples. The course also pays special attention to Korea's involvement with diverse international economic institutions, such as the OECD, APEC, and the WTO, etc.

Students gain basic knowledge of the process of Korea's economic development, where the country's interactions with the world economy have played a decisive role. The course is designed to be an interactive course, so that students must be prepared for class discussion by reading relevant materials and documents provided. Frequently documents from the WTO and OECD, as well as other international organizations will serve as basic readings.
