Course Description

Why do some countries grow rich while others remain poor? This course provides an introduction to theoretical and empirical research on economic growth and aggregate development. It introduces students to theoretical and empirical examination of income differences between countries and their growth processes. The first part of the course focuses on the impact of factor accumulation (physical capital, population growth, and human capital) on income and growth rates among countries. The second part of the course, demonstrates the importance of variation in productivity in explaining cross country differences in income and growth.
