Course Description

The course focuses on a selection from Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, along with some writing by Chaucer's contemporaries, and more recent translators and adaptors such as Patience Agbabi. Students consider such central themes as genre, gender, constructions of the self and community. The lectures provide a context for the selected texts and raise central issues and stimulate debate. Seminars involve workshop elements to help students to read Chaucer's Middle English and also engage in close reading exercises.
