Course Description

This course provides a comprehensive understanding of business ethics in modern work organizations. Students explore key concepts and theories, focusing on ethical and unethical behaviors within organizations. Students gain awareness of how organizations strive to manage their workforce and environments responsibly and sustainably. The course covers non-mainstream elements of organizational life, including organizational misbehavior and corporate crime. Students develop skills to analyze and solve organizational ethical problems using business ethics knowledge. Additionally, they understand the increasing importance of ethics, corporate responsibility, and sustainability for organizations today.
