Course Description

This course provides a series of lectures on current economic issues, which illustrate how basic economic principles may be applied to real problems. Upon completion of the course students are able to demonstrate knowledge of the core principles of economics; to use the power of abstraction to focus upon the essential features of an economic problem and to provide a framework for the evaluation of the effects of policy or other exogenous events; demonstrate an understanding of appropriate concepts in economics that may be of wider use in a decision-making context; and communicate economic ideas, concepts, and information using means of communication appropriate to the audience and the problem at issue.
