Course Description

The course consists of two parts: General and Thematic. The general part, will answer the question "What is global history?" and will critically discuss the methodological approaches that belong to the realm of global history. Specific topics will be examined from this perspective, including labor, social and women's movements, migration, empires, cities and global events such as the First and Second World Wars but also the 1968 and 1989. The thematic party, focuses on part on the global history of genocide, mass crimes, and war crimes in order to understand the dynamics, differences and complexities of mass violence in the 20th century. The first section of this part will be devoted to the “invention” of the concept of genocide, its difference with war crimes and mass crimes, while the second section will be devoted to an in-depth study of some case studies.
