Course Description

This course emphasizes the identification of the main researchers and institutions created for the study of the indigenous past of Mexico as well as the explanation of the development and cultural characteristics of the peoples who inhabited the different cultural areas between the Epiclassic and Late Postclassic periods. This elective is offered to first-semester students so that the historical overview also allows them to make the best use of the courses Historiography of Mexico II, other electives in the area of Ancient Mexico, and seminars (general, specialized, or research) that focus on indigenous peoples.
