Course Description

This course introduces students to the study of comparative literature through plays written in the 20th and 21st century from France, Germany, Iran, Italy, Russia, Spain, the UK, and the USA. All texts are read in English translation. The course introduces students to a representative and canonical range of fictional works, with focus on one literary genre - drama - and one over-arching theme. The theme is currently "Staging the Political," but may change depending on staff availability.
