Course Description

This course introduces students to contemporary Chinese foreign policy. It examines how historical and geographical legacies, domestic institutions, political leadership, and societal forces shape China's foreign policy decisions. The course also explores China's relations with major countries and regions, including the United States, Russia, Japan, and the Korean Peninsula, as well as China's growing role in global governance in areas such as the economy, technology, and the environment. By the end of the course, students will be able to critically analyze China's foreign policy in a changing global context.
