Course Description

English Lit and Pop Music? Yes! This course reads a variety of English literature, produced from the Middle Ages up through last week, in light of popular music of the last fifty years—and vice versa, too. The course takes both fields seriously (though fun is encouraged too), with an emphasis on connections with King's College London. A variety of genres, eras, and voices, from English lit, the English department, and the music world come together here. Archival work, both at KCL (e.g., the Duffy archives) and beyond, provides an important foundation and opportunities for discovery.
