Course Description

This interdisciplinary course increases students' vocabulary in the areas of business, tourism and law. Students analyze academic tests such as research reports, textbook chapters, and academic articles in the fields of business, tourism, and law. They also complete language tasks that are linked to the industry, such as reading and understanding the language of various types of contracts; reading and understanding the structure and content of annual reports and other company reports; analyzing the language of tourism products and services; and knowing how to interpret and use surveys and statistics published by official bodies.
