Course Description

This course provides a comprehensive framework for analyzing the behavior of the aggregate economy. We examine the long-run determinants of national income, economic growth, and inflation, along with the short-run fluctuations in output and employment. The course consists of two main parts. First, we analyze the economy in the long run, focusing on production, consumption, and the monetary system. We also cover the theories of economic growth. Second, we shift our focus to the short run, developing the IS-LM model and the AD-AS framework to understand business cycles, policy stabilization, and the trade-off between inflation and unemployment.
