Course Description

The course examines alternative methods of resolving legal disputes outside traditional court proceedings. Students examine the nature and dynamics of conflict, approaches to conflict management, and the legal frameworks governing negotiation, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, and other alternative dispute resolution (ADR) mechanisms. The course explores the advantages, limitations, and legal consequences of various dispute resolution processes, with particular attention to selecting the most appropriate method for different types of conflicts. Through case studies, simulations, oral presentations, and practical exercises, students develop skills in negotiation, mediation, conflict analysis, and dispute resolution strategy.
