Course Description

The course covers the connection between international corporate taxation and sustainability within the frameworks of law, economics, and politics. The course topics include a range of relevant perspectives in an engaging narrative, including political challenges related to tax and sustainability (e.g. initiatives from governments and international organizations) as well as corporate challenges (e.g. how to align corporate strategies with sustainable strategies, and how to communicate tax behavior to interested parties). This is a digital, distance course consisting of a large number of video lectures, quizzes, and the writing of an individual paper.
