Course Description

This beginner-level Spanish course develops foundational communicative proficiency at the A1 level of the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR). Students develop listening, reading, speaking, and writing skills while building essential vocabulary and basic grammatical structures. Through practical activities, students learn to communicate in simple everyday and academic situations, including introducing themselves, describing people and places, discussing routines and interests, and expressing basic preferences and needs. The course does not advance a full level but contributes to skill improvement.
