Course Description

The object of this seminar is to introduce students to theories of culture(s) or cultural theory. With theories of culture abounding, the class is only be able to discuss a selection of canonized texts. These texts – hopefully – help to enhance the understanding of how one has come to theorize culture(s) in the field of literary and cultural studies, as well as cultural history. Furthermore, the course tackles various angles of how one makes meaning of and through culture and how culture informs related fields of inquiry, such as, for example, media studies, philosophy, and sociology.
