Course Description

This course explores the morphology, syntax, semantics and pragmatics of the grammatical category of gender. It examines what kinds of gender systems exist, how gender is morphologically manifested on different grammatical categories, what the relation between gender and agreement is, how gender is interpreted and how this all varies across different languages. The class compares English with languages with different gender systems, such as German, Bosnian/Croatian/Montenegrin/Serbian, or those of Bantu languages, in order to gain a comprehensive overview of its crosslinguistic variation.
