Course Description

Drawing on primary and secondary sources, history textbooks, and academic and historical texts in English (from the late nineteenth century onward), this course allows students to discuss key conceptual terminology in the field of history, as well as major developments in Japanese history and their connections to more recent social and economic issues. The topics may cover a variety of historical periods, ranging from Tokugawa period to Shōwa era, from the foundation of the modern state to the postwar long economic boom.

Preliminary knowledge of modern and contemporary Japanese history is recommended.
