Course Description

This course examines key moments of struggle over what 'Australia' means and what it means to be Australian. Topics may include: imperial expansion and the colonial frontier; race relations and British race patriotism, Indigenous resistance and the White Australia policy; battles over land and labor; refugee and border protection; engagement with the Asia-Pacific; economic revolutions; protest movements and state formation. It will explore the ceaseless debate about government, community, history and identity that helps shape a collective and individual consciousness.
